New image needed to help fight underfunding

By Kathy Szorentini

In an attempt to deal with cuts in state funding and declining enrollment, MSC is planning academic and admission changes to improve the public image of the college. These plans are proposed in a letter to the college community from the Board of Trustees.

The letter invites all students and faculty to submit suggestions to the board by December 13, on ways to improve the programs offered at MSC in order to attract more students, as well as to promote MSC as a high quality institution.

According to Dr. David W.D. Dickson, president of the college and member of the academic program planning committee, "Prior to 1966, MSC was known as one of the most selective teachers' colleges, and our image was clear. After 1966 we became a multi-purpose college, but many still think of MSC as a teachers' college and this image is out of date."

In recent years MSC has been underfunded as compared to other NJ state colleges. The exact reason for this is unknown, Dickson said. The image problem is a possible reason for the underfunding. "In the last dozen years, we have been getting fewer dollars per person than we received before," Dickson said, "and I feel the prospects for the future are getting dimmer."

Part of the problem with underfunding lies in the state government's priorities for allocating money. Funds for higher education will not be a priority among legislators because it isn't a priority among voters. "Even if there is an increase in state revenue, dollars first go to state aid, second to transportation and roads, and then to funds for the Board of Higher Education (BHE). Higher education has the second largest number of employees, but the third largest budget out of the state agencies," he said.

Even now MSC may not be able to get funds promised from last year's budget because the state simply doesn't have it. Dickson has informed the various departments at MSC to plan on spending only 75 percent of what they expected to have, in case the state runs short of funds.

Another reason MSC is having financial difficulties is due to the budget the BHE prepares for the college. For each new contract, a state government representative and a representative from the teachers' union negotiate salary increases and these increases are supposed to be paid by the state. Dr. Kay Wilkins, member of the academic program planning committee explained, "There is no direct negotiating between the teachers' union and the school administration so this makes things even more complex. If the state doesn't fund the increases, then the money must come from other school accounts, therefore weakening other programs."

In order to increase the funds for MSC, changes are planned to improve the quality of education to attract not only more, but better students. "We must try to have an identification of excellence among all colleges in order to get more dollars from the state," Dickson said.

Many of these changes will be toward undergraduate programs. A new general education requirement program will start in September 1983 for all new students. "This new program will be more structured and although many students may find it more rigorous, it will make course selection simpler and give a stronger general education background for students." Admission will also become more selective and SAT score standards may become higher.

These stricter admission and undergraduate requirements will be impressed upon the BHE and will be sent to high school guidance counselors in a packet that has been made containing information about MSC and the programs of study it offers.

The Board of Trustees, headed by Ernest May, board president, (right) has made a public appeal for ideas to help enhance MSC's image. Dr. David W. D. Dickson, college president, (above) said prospects for funding of the college are getting dimmer. Dr. Kay Wilkins, faculty representative to the board, (above left) is acting as the faculty liaison to the board's committee addressing the crisis.

Proposed bill may mean another hike in tuition

By Kathy Carroll

A five percent tuition ceiling increase proposal for the 1983-84 school year is currently being reviewed by the Department of Higher Education (DHE). The ceiling is the maximum percentage of the total tuition cost that state colleges can charge students.

Currently students at state colleges pay 30 percent of the total tuition cost and the state pays the remaining 70 percent. However, if the proposed five percent ceiling increase is passed, students would be forced to pay 35 percent of their total tuition cost. This means that if a student takes 16 credits at MSC, his tuition could go up from the current $480 to $560, an increase of 16.7 percent.

Bill Solomon, New Jersey Student Association treasurer, said that student apathy leads to some tuition increases because often students don't lobby against the increases. "It starts off with students not communicating their needs to the state leaders," said Solomon. "These senators in turn don't put a priority on higher education when appropriating money. Later, when the college administration finds difficulty in meeting costs, they request that the DHE increase tuition and ceilings," he said.

"The economy," said Solomon, "combined with lack of appropriations and student apathy is responsible for this proposal being reviewed by the internal staff of the DHE."

Two Rutgers students testified at the DHE meeting in Trenton after requesting that the tuition not be increased for fiscal 1984. Solomon said the board's reply was, "The students have a political interest just as everyone else does and it's their responsibility to lobby."

Solomon said that the SGA is trying "to get to the root of the problem by encouraging students to vote."

The NJSA is also circulating information to other state colleges so they can act. They are also making sure a student representative is at every DHE meeting.

Students should take action and write letters to their elected officials since final consideration for this ceiling increase may not occur until February. For more information, contact Bill Solomon at the SGA office.

Man suspected in assault of student pleads guilty

By Mona Sehgal

Javier Chunga, charged with the sexual assault of a student at MSC in July, 1981, surprised the Passaic County prosecutor's office by pleading guilty to the attack just before the trial proceedings commenced on Oct. 7.

Although not a student at MSC, Chunga was attending a party at Bohn Hall with his brother who was registered at MSC for the summer session. Chunga, intoxicated with drugs and alcohol, was arrested by campus police within 30 hours. Along with the charge of criminal sexual offense, Chunga was accused of possession of drugs.

Chunga was taken to the Passaic County Jail and a $50,000 bail release was initially granted. Later, the amount was lessened to a $15,000 bond, on the assurance that Chunga would return for the trial.

The trial is scheduled for Dec. 8th, at which time Chunga's sentence will be pronounced. In the meantime, the court is studying his background and the circumstance of the rape.

According to Jayne Rich, chief of campus police, Chunga, who has no previous criminal record, may have pleaded guilty in hope of receiving a lighter sentence. Taken into consideration at the trial will be the severity of the sexual assault and the plea. The latter, said Debra Newcombe, campus policewoman trained in dealing with rape victims, may have been made in "a moment of guilt."

According to Rich, little is known about the rapist. Chunga, 28, resides in New York City, and has alleged that he was a security officer at State University of New York. Rich checked this information and found that Chunga was never employed by any New York state or city college.

MSC's record of forcible rapes for 1980 was three, second only to Rutgers University's total of five reported cases in all of its eight campuses.

Committee sets aims on affirmative action issues

By Eileen Oleksiak

At the Affirmative Action meeting, which was held last Wednesday, Dr. Jean Schlee, chairperson of the commission, drew attention to a letter from Chancellor Edward Hollander in which he commended the group's "...Affirmative Action efforts for this fall's faculty cohort." Hollander was referring to the fact that out of twenty-one track hires this semester at MSC, seven were black and three were Hispanic. It was generally agreed that this statistic showed a measure of progress for the commission.

However, other concerns expressed at the meeting indicated that all was not well with Equal Opportunity at MSC. During open discussion, many members spoke in troubled tones about the seemingly low morale of the minority faculty. Possible reasons for this condition were thought to be the administration's failure to make these faculty members feel at home on the MSC campus. Another contributing factor was the lack of guaranteed tenure. These were deemed causes for the departure of many minority faculty members from the teaching staff at MSC after such professors had taught at the college for only a short period of time. Outside causes were also taken into account, such as possible family problems and other job opportunities.

A suggested solution to this problem entailed a follow-up program for all new faculty members. Its purpose would be to establish a one-on-one relationship with the individual in an effort to help him/her adjust to a new environment.

As an extension of this concern, the general morale of the entire campus was also brought into question. "A paucity of leadership compounded by Reagan's severe budget cuts" was held responsible for the apathetic climate at MSC. In honor of the college's seventy-fifth birthday next year, it was proposed that Affirmative Action, as well as every other organization on campus, place special emphasis on building the morale of the school as a whole. The members seemed to think that this would be an ideal way to celebrate MSC as an enduring institution.

In the same vein, a member of the Hispanic Alumni Association talked of a morale-building project that his organization will sponsor. A mural is to be painted by the students in Partridge Hall. Funds raised through the selling of raffle tickets will be used to support this creative effort.

The response of Dr. David W.D. Dickson, president of the college, to Affirmative Action's report "on the status of classified employees at MSC" was also discussed. This included recommendations made by the department of personal services, all of which were headed under two categories: staff development and promotional opportunities, and entry level recruitment. Dickson rejected only five items in the report either because of high cost or impracticality. He suspended the implementation of two items until further study on the matters could be completed.

By virtue of this report and the work of Affirmative Action, the classified employee at MSC has nonetheless gained access to several new opportunities, such as the development of a biannual workshop "to advise continuing employees of Civil Service exam procedures, for both open competitive and promotional examinations." Programs for stenographers, groundworkers, and senior building maintenance workers were also established at the college's expense. They were designed primarily to give the classified employee an avenue for job promotion. Tentative dates for implementation were set for sometime in 1983.

In his response to the commission's annual report, Dickson praised the group for an "effective year" of Affirmative Action. He was pleased to note an upward trend in the hiring of minorities in classified positions as well as in administrative, professional, and technical categories.

Writing clinics offered

By Martha Cooney

Have you been assigned a 15-page term paper and don't know where to begin? Or, have you begun and don't know where to go from there? Then the library's term paper clinics are for you.

In a term paper clinic you'll work closely with a reference librarian in a group limited to five students. The librarian will help you get the most out of the card catalog by suggesting headings you may not have thought of, and will show you specialized periodical indexes, bibliographies, and handbooks. On the whole, you'll be offered a guiding hand through the library's resources which can, at term paper time, seem overwhelming.

The library has been offering term paper clinics since spring 1981. At that time we felt there was a need for something in addition to the formal library orientations we offer classes, and the assistance we give individually, but by necessity hurriedly, at the reference desk. So, the term paper clinics were designed as an alternative. We know that there are a number of students who have never had a library orientation, or who respond better in a workshop setting.

We'll be offering day and evening term paper clinics to any MSC student during the second and third weeks of November. You may sign-up at the reference and information desk on the main floor of the library, or call 893-4291 for more information.

campus police report

Condemner of sex, and other 'evils' draws crowd

By John DelGuercio

During the week of October 18 to October 24, incidents of unlawful assembly and harassment occurred. The unlawful assembly took place on October 21 in the mall outside the Student Center. It started at about 12:30 p.m. when James Gilles, an independent preacher from Indiana, began preaching about the one true path to God, which he said condemned alcohol, drugs, premarital sex, masturbation, homosexuality, and rock 'n' roll. He also claimed that those who did not follow this path closely and those who were not Christians would be sent to hell.

The crowd, which at any given time numbered between 200 and 300 people, was not content with Gilles' speech. There were students who wanted to express their ideas also and joined Gilles in the center of the mall. There were also those who mocked him, including people skateboarding, hanging moons, hugging Gilles, and yelling obscene remarks.

At about 2:30 p.m., campus police arrived on the scene. They proceeded to disperse the crowd because Gilles was speaking without a permit. A permit is required from Student Activities because the mall is a schedulable area. Though the crowd was broken up, the effects of Gilles' preaching kept people talking for hours.

Harassment occurred on October 20 in Freeman Hall when a female resident reported that a male resident was bothering her. The campus police arrived and escorted the two to their rooms. At this time, according to Sarah Baxter of Freeman Hall, the male has been reprimanded, but no complaint has been signed nor any formal action taken.

Also during this week, there were six reports of theft, three of which happened on October 18. The first occurred in the Student Center, the second in Russ Hall, and the third in the library. All thefts were of personal property that had been left unattended by its owner.

Two other thefts occurred on October 19. The first happened in Panzer Gym. Personal property was taken from an open, unattended locker. The second took place in the Fine Arts Building. Two students' paintings were stolen from racks inside the painting room; they were not on display. According to Dr. Martens, department head of fine arts, the paintings were of no value and were probably stolen because the thieves thought that they were.

The final theft happened on October 20, inside Freeman Hall. One of the rooms was left unlocked; it was entered and personal property was taken.

In all six cases none of the property has been recovered.

There were also two incidents of alarms going off, one of criminal mischief, and one of lewdness.

In Freeman Hall, a fire alarm was set off on October 18. It was found to have been tripped by steam coming from a dishwasher. The intrusion alarm of the MSC bookstore was triggered on October 24. Upon arrival of the campus police no one was found and the area was secured.

On October 21, a case of criminal mischief took place. A car parked in lot 20 had its windshield smashed by a rock. There are no suspects at this time.

On October 23, four males who tried to attend a party at Blanton Hall were not allowed to enter. Upset by this, one of the males exposed himself. The campus police were immediately called. The four were escorted from the building. So far, no complaints have been signed by the party hosts.

Dear Career Services:

I went to sign-up for recruitment, and noticed that you don't have anyone coming to speak with French majors. How come?

Questioning

Dear Questioning:

Xerox, Ohrbach's, JCPenny, K-Mart, UARCO, Inc., Transart, Hahne's, and McDonald's would be sorry to hear you say that. These companies are coming to Career Services this fall to interview January grads and want to speak with grads of liberal arts programs, so there are recruiters you can speak with if you want to.

If, however, these companies are not the type you have in mind, since they are looking for the general skills students have developed at MSC, rather than translation ability or knowledge of Racine, then work with us to get your job campaign started. Import/export houses, the UN, and foreign exchange agencies—organizations you might prefer—don't recruit anywhere. They don't have to bother doing so because they can choose their employees from applicants who contact them individually. Come talk to us, and we'll show you resources such as International Jobs, which tells about organizations and governmental agencies that hire people like yourself.

SGA news

By Lisa Fochesato and Peter Stankov

At yesterday's SGA meeting, Judy Echeveria, vice-president of internal affairs, told the legislature that she met with the parking committee last week. She said three topics were discussed at the meeting.

She said the parking committee is considering raising the parking sticker fee from the present $10 to $15. She said the money would be used to improve parking facilities and maintenance.

Echeveria said the committee was also planning to change the configuration of parking lot 13 across from Partridge Hall. She said that there would be two entrances and one exit only. The traffic would flow in one direction through the lot.

She also said the parking committee proposed to make Webster Road, which passes by the tennis courts, one way going down the hill. She said this was being considered because the amount of traffic going up the hill was found to be negligible by the campus police.

Emergency legislation was considered to appropriate $750 to replace the stencil-imaging machine in the SGA office. According to Mark Spinelli, SGA president, the machine is needed to provide the student community with reproduction services and had to be replaced immediately.

WMSC's constitution was amended by legislative action. The radio station's name was officially changed to WMSC-FM and the duties of station officers were clarified, according to Peter Feinstein, WMSC's general manager. Alpha Phi Omega's Class IV charter was approved. The name of the Society for the Fantastic was changed to the Science Fiction Club. A trip to the Metropolitan Museum of Art, sponsored by Dan Whittaker, was funded by the Montclair Transportation Association for $210. The trip is open to all.

United effort is needed to save education

State college students absorbed a ten percent tuition increase this year without much complaint. There were no mass rallies decrying the rising cost of an education and there was no massive turnout at the phonathon organized by the New Jersey Student Association. The result of the lack of outcry was, of course, the passage of increase, but it also served as a sign to the state legislature that New Jersey college students really aren't very concerned about what they pay for their education.

The legislature's attitude is becoming quite apparent as they consider more cuts in the higher education budget and a rise in the tuition ceiling for the 1983-84 school year.

We can write stories and editorials until we turn blue and it will not affect the decision of the board or the legislature. The only protest they will recognize is that of large numbers of students; in letters, rallies, and most of all, at the voting booth.

Election day is only five days away, but with a little effort on all of our parts we can get our message across: we will not stand for more tuition increases. Find out how your assemblyman or state senator voted on education-related bills. Either call his/her office or the League of Women Voters; they should have the information. If he or she voted for the tuition increase or the cuts in the education budget, vote him or her out of office.

Even this may not be enough. We need to call Governor Kean's office and T. Edward Hollander's office to let them know how we feel. Phone calls and pressure from enough people will get things done. We need a united effort to protect our education and save our money.

Drop-In advice

Self-help groups will work for their members

What do Alcoholics Anonymous, Parents Without Partners and Overeaters Anonymous have in common? They are all self-help groups. A self-help group unites people with similar ideas, experiences or problems with the intention of aiding its members through shared experience. The idea is that people who have dealt with the same kind of experience or difficulty offer each other a unique type of emotional support, empathy and wisdom afforded by personal experience. The concept works. There are over 500,000 self-help groups in existence in the United States covering almost any experience one can imagine.

Often when a crisis or difficult life experience occurs, the tendency is to feel isolated and set apart from others as you struggle to cope. Contact with others relieves that sense of alienation. It can also provide practical information and resources. Most of all, a self-help group provides a caring environment that allows you to vent feelings that are often hard to express. In a self-help group the nod of understanding is genuine. These people really do know how you feel because they have been there themselves.

Self-help groups can also focus on self-improvement. Discussing the progress and frustrations of trying to eliminate an unwanted habit like smoking enables you to get added encouragement from people who really know the pitfalls as well as the keys to success.

In our very sophisticated society, we still tend to harbor archaic notions regarding mental health and mental illness. We hide our fears, problems and questions from the public's critical eye. Membership in a self-help group is not a stigma, but rather a healthy approach to life. Self-help groups can be generated around any idea. Corporate executives come together to aid in decision-making and stress management. Joining together with others who have similar interests is a natural bond in communication.

Self-help groups are started by ordinary people who have some courage, some commitment and a strong sensitivity to others. There is no financial gain involved. The rewards come from the sense of belonging and joining with others who truly understand. People are learning more and more that common people bonding together are a rich and as yet still untapped resource. Each one of us has a potential to really aid another human being and benefit personally as well.

The Drop-In Center is a network of people interested in organizing and/or participating in self-help groups. The topics of these groups will be based upon the response of the campus community. This is a pilot program on New Jersey college campuses. Interested parties will find flyers in this issue of The Montclarion, on the information desk at the Student Center, on the bulletin boards at College Hall, or at the Drop-In Center.

The founder-president and executive director of "The Speak-Easy International Foundation, Inc." (a self-help group for stutterers), Bob Gathman, and co-founder Antoinette Gathman will conduct a two-session workshop for the organizers of self-help groups at the Drop-In Center. For additional information call the Drop-In Center any time at 893-5271.

Ex-treasurer in response

To the editor,

As the former executive treasurer of the Student Government Association, I feel it is my responsibility to comment on the editorial titled "Impossible to make the end meet" found in the Oct. 7, 1982 issue of The Montclarion.

What is "poor fiscal management" if it is not irresponsibility or mismanagement? Is it irresponsible to curb expenditures when the funds are not available to pay for them? It is true that the economy has hit the Student Government, like everyone else, hard. It is also true that while SGA fees have not increased since 1967 that Class One budgets as a whole have increased every year up to 1981. At that point in time, deficits were already occurring and the possibility of bankruptcy was not remote, thus requiring SGA as a whole to reduce spending or increase revenue.

Since a referendum to increase SGA fees failed twice due to apathetic turnouts at the polls, the only solution to prevent Student Government from financial disaster is to make more efficient use of the available funds. The bleakness of the situation now requires that SGA reduce its expenditures, cut waste, increase price comparison, cut frivolous unnecessary expenses, limit expense incurred through self-praise (i.e. awards and banquets) and most importantly, the situation requires that programs be carefully planned within a rigid budget.

From the point of view of an executive board member, the financially unstable climate requires responsible, careful management. An even greater demand is placed on the SGA executive treasurer who must keep a close eye and a mental approximation of every expenditure which she authorizes. The situation also requires the executive president of the SGA to concern himself with the finances of the organization for which he is legally responsible.

In this particular instance, I question the responsibility of a poor economy for WMSC's financial problems:

...when WMSC had two banquets for its members last year instead of one because they chose to spend the extra money in that line on a party instead of transferring funds to another line where it could be used to purchase "equipment so badly needed", against the SGA executive treasurer's advice. ...when WMSC spent an unauthorized $300 on awards and plaques, for which they received a fine since they failed to obtain permission to purchase said items.

...when the WMSC general manager and treasurer left signed vouchers in my office, giving their authorization to any expense without knowing what that expense might have been.

...when WMSC circulated promotional gifts to their staff which were paid for through their budget (i.e. key chains). ...when WMSC purchased expensive services and equipment in haste to avoid the red tape involved with correcting problems incurred during the move to the annex.

Taking these observations into consideration, I am hard pressed to place blame on a poor economy, removing WMSC or SGA's management from any responsibility for the financial woes WMSC is now facing.

I suggest that it is not the economy which causes poor "fiscal management". Rather, it is the state of the economy which unveils poor financial management, thus creating a situation where it is impossible to make the ends meet.

Second Careers make debut

On Friday night, October 1, the Second Careers Club held its second monthly meeting of the year. Representatives of the SGA informed the group of the various services available to all students, such as legal aid, a pharmacy program, and a notary public.

We will be reporting to you regularly, but hope as many of you as possible will join us and attend meetings. The club meets the first Friday night of each month. The next meeting will be at 8 p.m. on Friday, November 5. Plans are underway for a gala Christmas celebration. Join us for the fun.

It is important for Second Careers people to be apprised of these services and to take advantage of their availability. Much of this information can be found in the 1982-83 SGA calendar.

For further information on the Second Careers Club, kindly contact Dr. Alicia Savage in the Second Careers office.

SFSR clarifies freeze referendum

To the editor:

Many students are under the false impression that the freeze referendum on the November 2 ballot calls for a unilateral halt of nuclear weapons testing, production, and deployment on the part of the United States alone. This is the impression one might get from some of the literature that those against the freeze are using to "wallpaper" the various buildings on campus.

On the contrary, the freeze in question is a mutually verifiable bilateral freeze on the testing, production, and deployment of nuclear weapons, which means that both the United States and the Soviet Union must agree on the steps taken to provide a verifiable freeze.

With respect to verification, both countries have advanced technological methods which would ensure the halt of testing, production, deployment, and the storage of nuclear weapons. Some of the means available are: satellites, on-site inspections, and seismographic data.

Another method of verification, the use of seismographic data, was described by Dr. Michio Kaku (Prof. of Physics, CUNY) when he spoke here on September 22. According to Dr. Kaku, seismographic monitors indicate whether or not nuclear weapons are being exploded (i.e., tested) underground by either country.

According to retired Navy Rear Admiral Gene LaRocque and Dr. Herbert Scoville, a former senior Central Intelligence Agency official and recognized expert on verification, as well as many other experts, both the U.S. and the Soviet Union have numerous highly advanced satellites which are capable of reading the numbers on the license plate of a car. These satellites are capable of monitoring mining for weapons-grade materials which then have to be transported to factories as well as monitoring the transportation of finished weapons to huge, cumbersome silos. (Ever try to hide a silo?)

In an article written by retired Navy Rear Admiral Eugene J. Carol, Jr., entitled "A Freeze Can Be Verifiable," (New York Times, June 3, 1982) the freeze proposal requires both countries to develop procedures whereby the U.S. and the Soviet Union would permit on-site inspections which would preclude the undetected manufacture of nuclear weapons.

In conclusion, we, the authors, hope that this letter will help to dispel some of the misconceptions some people may have about the freeze. There exists an abundance of literature about the bilateral freeze. This literature is available both through organizations for and organizations against freezing nuclear weapons. Read both sides, educate yourselves, and vote on November 2!

Students speak

What effect will this Civil Rights suit have on police protection of students?

By Janet Hirsch and Toni DeMarco

I think if the students win the suit then there will definitely be a change.

Jenny Miller
Freshman/chemistry

I think that the police will be a little more careful in the future, but in general I don't think it will change that much.

Alan Smith
Freshman/undeclared

I think it will affect the police by making them be more careful in the future.

Jerome Bivens
Freshman/pre-law

It might affect the police. They might be more careful and look at the situation more closely before they take any action.

Terry Albarella
Freshman/computer science

Overall I don't believe there will be any change. I just hope it will make those police who come on campus more aware and more responsible.

Dave Stevens
Graduate/industrial psychology

It really shouldn't have any effect. It is a shame that this incident occurred, and hopefully the police will think before they act.

Flat footed dancers exposed

By Arlene Theresa

After seeing Pilobolus last year and knowing the capabilities of the troupe, I was disappointed in last weekend's performance given at MSC. The feeling received throughout the evening was that of an overdone and stale performance. The performance in every scene seemed lifeless; that certain excitement I was used to was gone.

The only scene that actually showed any form of life was Walklyndon. This was a slapstick dance skit featuring four men running into each other in all sorts of ridiculous positions. The scene was reminiscent of being at a circus, but if I had wanted to see stunts I would have gone to see Ringling Brothers, Barnum and Bailey Circus instead.

The final dance performed by the troupe can easily be termed "outrageously gross." A mime number consisting of two extremely tall girls chasing and waving to each other proved nothing short of ludicrous. As the dance progressed something appeared from beneath both girls' dresses. Aaah, naked men! Having naked men on stage, in that context, was unnecessary for the scene. Any artistic value was lost in a plethora of dangling genitals. If the men were clothed, the message conveyed would have been just as effective.

The only enjoyable scene was entitled What Grows in Huygen's Window. The costumes for this scene were fabulous. The dancers had on long, draping gowns with big red hats, and long wooden arms.

Pilobolus' audience reaction was not as positive as last year's. What they saw was a repeat of scenes from the last 10 centuries. The Pilobolus dancers needed motivation. They forgot that this was probably the first time that the members of the audience saw them perform. Is it asking too much to see as enthusiastic a performance as in previous years? In short, if the group Pilobolus wasn't so bored with its own act, we wouldn't have been either.

Soccer team wins fourth straight 3-0

By Frank DiPietro

The Indians upped their record to 7-3-1 downing Ramapo State College 3-0 last Saturday at Sprague Field. The win was the team's fourth straight.

John Ioannou, a freshman, scored two goals, his eighth and ninth of the season, and Rick Emmel netted the game's final score.

The Indians were scoreless in the first half, but continued gunning in the second half getting a total of 24 shots on goal to Ramapo's eight. Ioannou's first score came at 71:01 and nine minutes later he took an assist from Frank Erili for his second. Emmel closed out the scoring with his goal at the 84:41 mark.

The Indian secondary, seen here in practice, will be tested by TSC's potent offense. The game will decide the conference championship and an NCAA play-off berth as well. The Indians downed TSC at home last year to take both the conference title and a spot in the play-offs.

MSC played heads up ball to shut out Ramapo 3-0 in a conference game last Saturday at Sprague Field. The Indians took their fourth straight after a dismal 3-3 start.

Indians to face Trenton State for conference championship

The New Jersey State Athletic Conference football championship will be on the line here at Sprague Field Saturday night when MSC hosts arch-rival Trenton State. Kickoff time is 8 p.m.

The Indians are 5-0-2 for the season after a 14-14 tie last week with Central Connecticut State. The Indians, defending NJAC champions, are also unbeaten in three conference games.

The MSC-TSC clash will be the 50th contest between the two archrivals. The Indians lead the series 31-18-1.

One of the more interesting aspects of the game will be the home field advantage. On the MSC astroturf, installed in 1979, Coach Fred Hill's Indians have an 18-1 mark. The only team to defeat the Indians on astroturf are the Lions from TSC. The loss came on November 1, 1980 when TSC defeated the Indians 26-13, winning its first conference crown.

MSC enters the game with 10 straight conference wins since the loss in 1980 to the Lions.

In addition to the NJAC championship the game will also have a major bearing in the National Collegiate Athletic Association Division III rankings. Before the tie last week to the Blue Devils of CCS the Indians were ranked fourth in the nation behind Baldwin Wallace, West Georgia, and Augustana. The tie will probably drop the Indians back in the national rankings.

In addition to Casale's attempt to reach 4,000 yards in the TSC game, end Ken Oliver, a senior from Passaic, will be shooting for an all-time record in receptions. Going into the TSC game Oliver has made 42 receptions good for 663 yards. He needs only five yards to erase the old standard of 675 yards set by wide receiver Terry Porter for most yards on passes caught in a single season.

The Lions' attack is headed by Bob Sellari, a senior from North Brunswick and John Sumiel, a sophomore from Salem.

Quarterback Flip Faherty, a junior from Ewing, has turned in a fine performance in leading the Lions to seven straight wins. A transfer student from Moorehead State, Faherty took over the quarterbacking from Rick Kleinkauf, who nearly dumped the Indians last year with an outstanding game.
